I don't have enough information or knowledge to say yes or no. I imagine it will eventually be needed because fewer and fewer students will know how to do viable research or even use a library as time goes on.

Yes but writing faculty should provide this, to build relationships with students over multiple classes / years.

It depends. I would not make this a universal requirement

maybe yes, maybe no - I would like to see some discussion with faculty of this

I'd say no: add the credit, perhaps, to a course that is currently offered, such as WRTG A111

I teach at grad level only

I'm inclined to say yes, but I also understand that to require it would require additional personnel resources in the Library which may not be supported by resource allocators could this be paired with an existing GER?

Perhaps.

I wish, but students wouldn't take it unless required for their majors

No idea

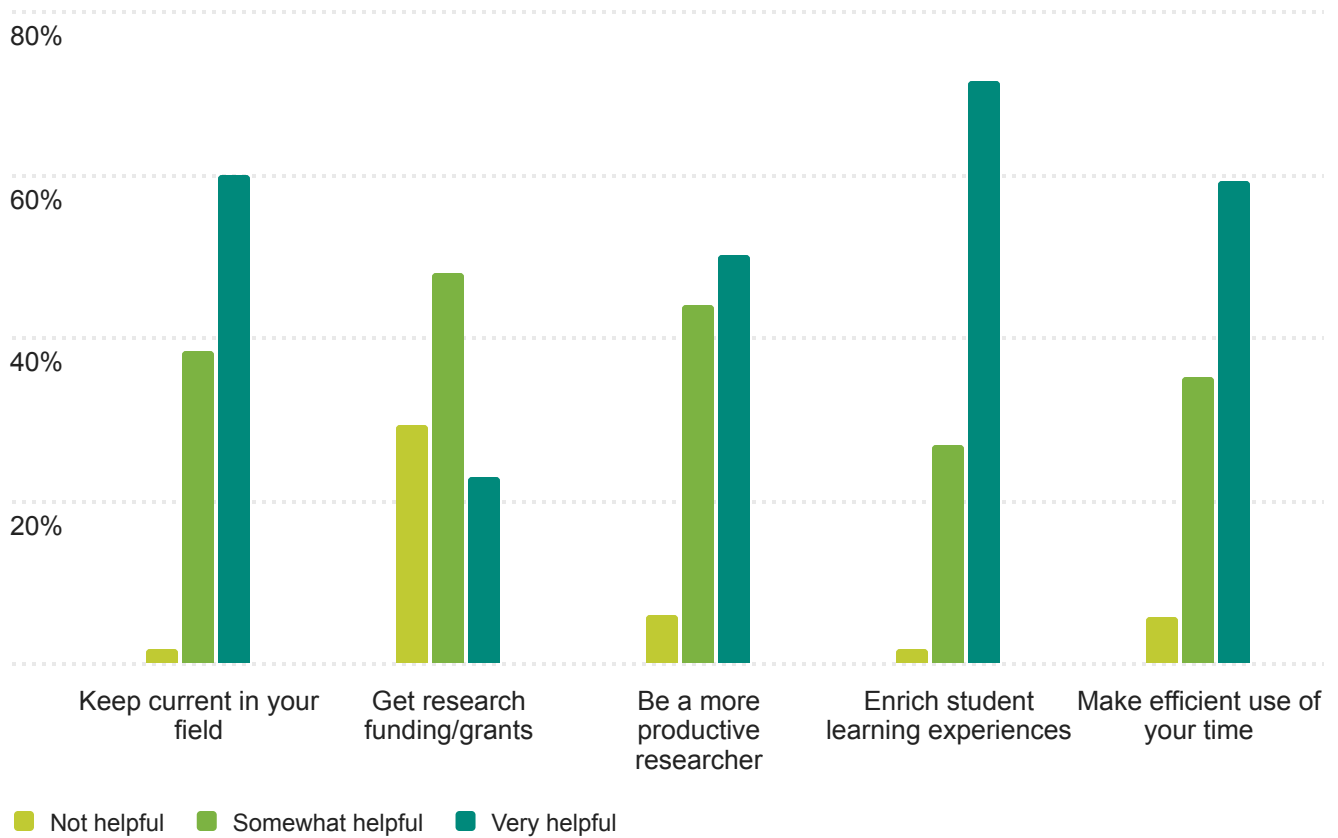

Not sure
